Liya & Family
Free learning. Shared possibility.

FOR TRUSTED COMMUNITY SPACES

A four-week learning pilot

For libraries, churches, and community centers supporting families with a small, supervised practice group.

Before the first session

Use your organization's safeguarding and guardian-permission procedures. Arrange approved adult supervision, especially for younger children. Select comfortable levels and print lessons when devices or internet are limited.

A 30-minute session

5 min: welcome, choose a level, and discuss the goal.
10 min: read the explanation and work through the example.
10 min: try the activity and practice with feedback.
5 min: reflect together and send a printed lesson or report home.

Shared devices are not a group dashboard

Each browser supports four local learner profiles. A group of 20 needs multiple approved devices or paper activities. Keep generic learner labels and a consistent device assignment. Anyone using the browser can see its records. Parent access from another phone is not automatic.

Keep the pilot small and useful

Try 5-10 families for four weeks. Follow one numbered lesson per subject each week or adjust the pace. Ask which levels were used, what was missing, and whether the report helped. Record general feedback without identifying children.

Be clear about what you recommend

This is a free, family-led supplement with 12 lessons per level. It is not an accredited school, complete curriculum, assessment, or staffed tutoring service. No partner affiliation is implied by using the materials.

Share safely

Use the public flyer and QR code. Follow your organization's rules before keeping or sharing progress reports. Never put child details, backups, or reports into the public GitHub feedback channel.

Community kit: liyasamra.github.io/liya-and-family/#community

---

Family-led by Samra Ayele. Inspired by his daughter, Liya.